Since there is no ransom to be paid, Nadine uses her seductive charm to persuade the kidnapper to hand over his phone. The press and the people of the small town are fascinated by her. Nadine waits at a local hotel, where the kidnapper is having a party with his friends. She sneaks into the party and, while exchanging places with one of the guests, manages to take the phone with her and shows it to the people in the room. Nadine also catches the attention of the kidnapper, who wants to take her on a date. He sends his friend to deliver to her a package containing a rose. On her way to meet him Nadine is pursued by the town council, who are trying to capture her and find out who she really is. The councilmen beat up the kidnapper's friend and mistake Nadine for him. She escapes by trying to persuade the councilmen to help her get into the town hall. Even though her plan fails, she succeeds in seducing them and they agree to help her. Nadine is taken to a hot tub where she is left alone. She puts the phone in the tub
